The most difficult thing about our work at Madhu was ①_____. We had to think about the local situation, because ②_____ could lead us to make wrong decisions. Since ③_____ were very limited, we had to look at each situation as it happened and choose the best thing to do.

I clearly remember the day ④_____ to our hospital. I saw immediately that ⑤_____. We gave him oxygen, but he was pale, his breathing was difficult, and the oxygen mask ⑥_____. He was not improving. We were using our last tank of oxygen. We didn't know ⑦_____. If another person needing oxygen arrived, maybe this tank could ⑧_____. I made my decision, and made a sign to the nurse who was working with me ⑨_____. The nurse simply couldn't do so. I waited five seconds and turned it off myself. I did it ⑩_____ to leave the child in the hands of God. Was that the right decision? I still don't know.
